[redacted] the institute had a great deal of power, and [redacted] the leaders of the plants were very much afraid when the AEK inspections came along. Whenever there was something in the plant that did not please the inspecting officials of the AEK, the management of the plant/~~would~~ was accused of sabotage, and it ~~often~~<sup>then</sup> happened that a director or a chief engineer was arrested. The officials of the AEK themselves had no executive capacity, but they often called in the help of the AVH. The AVH installations were obligated to give their cooperation. The inspecting AEK officials were provided with identifications with a yellow strip, and upon showing these, they got the cooperation of the AVH.

[redacted] a school for the purpose of becoming an AEK inspector [redacted] was housed in the former Ministry of Finance, where other plant schools were located. [redacted]
